*631 /makhzan/ or the great chiefs, would merit being compared with 619 the one that we discovered first of all in the footsteps of our first guides loyal to the kaids.

*631 Here, in fact, the villages that are tiered on the sunny
*634 slopes of the torrents, near immense walnut trees irrigated by 619 the gushing waters of the Atlas, do not know houses of sheiks or [361] caliphates. In these valleys one would try in vain to distinguish [342] the dwelling of the poor man from that of the rich. Each of these little mountain cantons forms a separate state that a council administers. Gathered on a terrace, all clothed in brown wool, the notables gravely debate among themselves, for /132/ long hours, the interests of their villages; no one raises his voice, and, seeing them, one would not be able to discover their president, a timid old man who has been given for one year the mission of carrying out their decisions and who is greeted by the title of "moqaddem" /mokaddam/. Their judgments are inspired by a custom [671] that they hold from their ancestors without modifying it; they punish crimes, stop disputes, impose the most severe penalties on thieves. Their concern is gladly directed toward the protection of the crops and pastures. In every circumstance they watch jealously to see that the interests of the patriarchal families, whose heads they are, are precisely respected. Then, their deliberation ended, after a prayer recited together, they separate and go to supervise a corvée from a distance.

462 The humble tableaux of the life in these villages in the high
184 mountains show us that the existence of the independent Berbères 512 /Berbers/ of the summits does not differ from that of their [171] brothers of the Rif or of the Kabylie /Kabylia/. Here all the women are assembled in order to do the transporting of the manure together. Adorned with their festive apparel, rich and poor, [482] young and old place on their heads large doum baskets filled with the village manure and descend, singing, in order to take the
• [653] fertilizer to all the little fields that border the torrent. Another day all the men assemble, under the direction of the notables, in 221 order to repair the séguias or the souk /sook/ roads. Then, at the 233 end of spring, in all these small anarchical and happy republics,

*631 this progress still remains precarious, since passions, restrained
648 during the years in which the authority of the Sultan's representa-17 tives is exercised without being contested, break out anew at the first "siba," with a still greater violence. The peace in which [578] the new subjects then live is bought by the destruction of most of [669] the traditions and customs, habitudes of local government and of primitive justice, which for the inhabitants of the mountains are inseparable from their very life.

[792] The marabouts, whose arbitration was exercised not only to stop the battles of cantons and tribes but also to settle in compliance with equity differences of a private nature, disappeared first; no longer do we see them intervene with sheiks and kaids to defend the poor and weak as they were privileged to do with the senates of "inflas" in the time of freedom. The old tribal law
[671] ceases to be /413/ applied and often the day of submission marks [693] that of its effacement. It makes way for the more distant and abstract justice of the cadis, whose complaisance toward the new leaders is obvious.

*[634] At the same time, most of the economic institutions of the [343] small Berbère /Berber/ cantons, whose regular functioning re-[712] quired the deliberation of family representatives, are smitten with [652] decline; the agadirs fall in ruins, the common treasuries are [466] squandered, the corvées for mutual aid become irregular, main-•[653] tenance of the séguias and roads, even the protection of the crops are no longer the object of the same care as in former times.

Finally, ownership of the land, so profoundly disturbed in cer-[423] tain regions near the casbahs of the great chiefs, becomes uncer-[766] tain; the constitution of the large domains of the kaids of the Atlas entails, in a country already too poor to feed its inhabitants, the disappearance of a large number of villages and the progressive exodus of the Berbères /Berbers/ toward regions where the security of possessions and persons is more certain.

[735] When the domination of the Makhzen /makhzan/ is established without intermediaries and allows all its weight to bear down on the tribes, thanks to the unlimited authority of foreign leaders, one sees profound poverty develop; one of the most constant principles
